A Word from Michael

Several weeks ago I was in Atlanta for a national CBF meeting, and Dr. L. Gregory Jones of Duke University led a seminar on "Developing Strategy in the Midst of Change." While the seminar was specifically designed to help CBF live and plan strategically into its future, there were many concepts that were applicable to the local church.

One such concept was "Traditioned Innovation." Traditioned Innovation honors the past but is not imprisoned by it. Neither does it make things up willy-nilly as it goes along. It seeks to experiment with ways to bring the life-giving aspects of our tradition into the present and the future, so that we can better fulfill our mission in a rapidly changing world.

UBC is a church blessed with a rich tradition, and we are also faced with the challenge of how we can continue to share the love of Christ in a rapidly changing world. Traditioned Innovation suggests that we clarify our mission and tap into our enduring values and strengths in order to experiment with new ways to reach out to more people with the gospel of Christ. I'm beginning to have these conversations with our leaders, and I look forward to engaging the whole church with these questions in the months ahead.

Concerns

Herman Johnson — C'ville Health and Rehab

Sympathy

Christian sympathy is extended to Violet Anderson and her family at the death of her sister, Evelyn Wyllie.

Thank You

Ever since my "routine" surgery in July turned sour, our UBC family has given us overwhelming support and love. THANK YOU for the lovely cards, calls, visits, beautiful flowers and plants, delicious meals, and most of all, your prayers. We are grateful for your acts of kindness and grace. I hope to return to church in a few weeks . . . inshallah.

— Margie (& Nat) Howell
