Words From Will

The call came first from a nurse, and then from the chaplain’s office at the UVA Hospital. They were looking for a gathering place, a place for staff members to share stories and offer support to one another after the tragic death of a beloved friend and co-worker. They were looking into various meeting spaces in the hospital, but a conference room just wasn’t right. And then they thought of UBC.

The service was held last Thursday evening in our sanctuary, a time and place chosen so that hospital staff could walk over after their shift or during a dinner break. Many of them did. During the service, pain was voiced, hope expressed, and hugs shared. It was a time of healing and tearful encouragement, and while UBC’s role in the service was small—simply providing a space to meet—it was significant.

Occasions of this depth and magnitude are rightly called holy, and when people arrived at UBC last Thursday, they found doors opening into a holy space, hallowed by generations of prayer and worship. We often think of ministry as something that we do or provide, but sometimes ministry is as simple as opening our doors when circumstances cry out for holy ground.

A few years ago, when we began exploring what “hospital ministry” might look like, we didn’t know exactly what to expect, but we knew that the foundation for meaningful engagement with the hospital must be a relationship. This relationship has deepened with each tray of cookies and cards we’ve delivered to staff lounges, with each Touch-a-Truck event we’ve hosted together, and with each of the projects we’ve undertaken in the past few months: an OIAM project sewing wheelchair bags, a WMU/VBS collection of toys for hospitalized children, and our continuing involvement with the Hospitality House and Ronald McDonald House.

We continue to seek out ways we can extend the love of God to our neighbors at UVA. Please keep the ideas coming! But as we do so, let us also remember that while each of these projects is an act of ministry in itself, collectively they deepen our relationship with the hospital community so that on the hard days when a need does arise, our neighbors know that UBC will be here when they call.

UBC Parking Lot Usage Changing Soon

Target Date: Tuesday, August 1

We anticipate entering an agreement with Piedmont Virginia Parking Center (PVPC) to ensure that parking is always available and free for UBC's members and visitors while at the church building, to provide additional revenue for general budget expenses, and to remove the burden of daily management of UBC's parking lots from the church staff. Additional information has been sent by email and postal mail to church members and associate members regarding the financial benefits this arrangement will afford our congregation.

Benefits for UBC:

- Ensure more weekday parking is available and free for church members and visitors attending activities at the church building.
- Generate regular revenue for the general budget expenses of UBC.
- Replace the unintentional "free public first come, first parked" weekday parking with hourly paid parking.
- Set aside a limited number of spaces to offer discounted monthly weekday parking rates for active UBC members and associate members and competitive monthly rates for nonmembers.
- Remove the task of parking lot management from clergy and support staff.

How This Will Be Done:

- Piedmont Virginia Parking Center (PVPC) will reline and number all parking spaces.
- PVPC will install two payment boxes, one for each parking lot.
- PVPC will daily monitor the parking lots to collect hourly parking payments, arrange towing as needed, and interact with owners whose vehicles are towed.
- PVPC will administer monthly parking, providing discounted rates for active UBC members and associate members and competitive rates for all others.
- PVPC and UBC will divide the proceeds of all hourly and monthly parking fees.

How UBC's Parking Needs Will Be Guaranteed:

- All vehicles with current or newly issued UBC parking stickers may park free at any time on any day while attending services, meetings, special events, etc., at the church building.
- Weekday visitors to the church building will receive free parking passes for their vehicles while parked in the church parking lots.
- During all Sunday worship services, Wednesday evening programs, weddings, funerals, or special events open to the public, all parking will be free and the payment boxes will be covered to avoid any confusion of whether payment is expected.
- PVPC will continue to provide free parking in the 14th Street Garage for UBC on Sundays and Wednesday evenings and for events such as funerals.
