Ancient Practices to Feed Our Souls WATCH

Our contemporary culture craves new things. Some of our consumerism is rooted in planned obsolescence. Some of it comes from Veblenism (or ‘keeping up with the Joneses’). It also can come from increasing awareness of new products and services that can make our lives easier. So, it’s not all bad. However, our faith is rooted in traditions dating back thousands of years. We can look back through the mists of time and learn from those who came before us. Those lessons can help us and feed our souls today.

When I went on my recent retreat to Iona Abbey, I entered into a monastic world. Life in the abbey is based on communal living. The people, both guests and staff, eat all meals together and live in community. Even the way we ate our meals was structured to accentuate community. At 8 a.m., we gathered in the refectory and sat at long tables. No one snagged a cup of coffee or tea first. We sat. As others joined us, we said, “Good morning” and began conversations. I’ve already spoken to several not-morning-people who said this would be a challenge. It was, but I grew accustomed to it. The practice forced me to pause and greet the new day with other people (before my first cup of coffee!). Someone would ring a bell to get everyone’s attention, say grace, give breakfast instructions, and then we began eating.

The abbey leaders organize each meal in the same way. At the end of breakfast, people went to their work assignments. At 9 a.m., we all went to the abbey for morning prayers. This was a short worship service with readings, scripture, a few hymns, and a benediction. Lasting around 20 minutes, the worship service served as a centering point for the day.

On my retreat, we had sessions or an activity after morning prayers. We came back together for lunch and had another session or free time in the afternoon. There was usually some activity in the evening after dinner, and the day ended with evening prayers at 9 p.m. The evening worship was a similar format to the morning.

Iona Abbey is based on the Benedictine Rule. When St. Columba landed on Iona in 563 CE, he brought Christianity to Scotland and England. Even though the Abbey has changed over the years and is no longer under the Benedictines, it maintains the monastic feel. The community members commit to a Rule of Life. In future weeks, I will write more about the monastic Rule of Life and how we can apply these ancient practices today.

Peace,
Matt

Clergy Appreciation Month

October is Clergy Appreciation Month. The Apostle Paul is thought to have first suggested clergy appreciation in 1 Timothy 5:17, when he stated, "The elders who direct the affairs of the church well are worthy of double honor, especially those whose work is preaching and teaching." That teaching helped inspire the start of Clergy Appreciation Month in 1992 to recognize pastors.

Let us show our pastors how extremely fortunate we are to serve alongside such quality ministers at UBC! Pray for them, write them a note, send them an email, post thanks on your favorite social media, or thank Matt and Val in person for the many gifts (leadership, compassion, stewardship, and faith) they generously share with us all year round!

Youth Retreat at Eagle Eyrie, November 11-13

CBF Virginia is hosting the Fall Youth Retreat for grades 6-12 at Eagle Eyrie this November! During this retreat students engage in three different breakout sessions (of their choosing) that cover a variety of subjects including art, recreation, discussion groups, discipleship learning, leadership skills, and fun and games.

Each night there is also a worship service that challenges students to grow in their understanding of God. And this year, yours truly has been asked to preach in the worship services! I will be teaching each day around the theme of laying down burdens, pulling from Matthew 11:28 as the worship theme for the retreat.

Cost per student is $95, and scholarships are available for UBC families to send their youth to this event. Students must sign up by October 30. Our church will be sharing chaperones with FBC Waynesboro, taking UBC and FBCW students together. Stay tuned for details about an upcoming event to introduce our groups to one another prior to the retreat!
